

LBCCFA's Monday Morning Message- 15 April 2019

Did You Know?

- In today's Rep. Council Spotlight:

- Name: Chef Pierre Jues

- Department: Culinary Arts
- Year arrived at LBCC: "I started teaching at LBCC August 2003, so I'm finishing my 16th year at the college."
- Favorite topic to teach: "It changes; for a while I really liked teaching French Pastries & Specialty Cakes, then it was the Bakery Counter/Production Class, but lately it's been Artisan Breads."
- Department brag: "The V Building. When I started at LBCC in 2003, our department was in the old kitchen next to the cafeteria, and all the talk was about an upcoming 'new facility,' which originally was planned as 2 or 3 classrooms at the PCC Campus that were going to be remodeled as kitchens. Then around 2006/2007 the 'new facility' was going to be at Los Coyotes for our Programs and Economic Development. But that didn't happen either. The T-Building was built next. Around 2009, the planning stages started on this version of the 'new facility.' I worked for 6 years with the Bond Team on researching and specifying the equipment, appliances, the layout of the kitchens, etc. We finally moved in to our current home in Fall 2015."
- Free-Time: "Meditate, ride my motorcycle and bicycle, read, watch documentaries, and lately I've been following the movement of our brothers and sisters, the Gilets Jaunes in France."

This Week in Labor History:

On April 20th, 1914, the Colorado National Guard killed at least five coal miners along with thirteen women and children in Los Animas County, CO, in what came to be known as the Ludlow Massacre. The governor of Colorado deployed the National Guard to break up a tent colony of striking miners who had demanded that the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company recognize the miners' union, the United Mineworkers. To learn more about the Ludlow Massacre, see historian Thomas Andrews' book Killing for Coal.

Respectfully,

Your LBCCFA Executive Board
